- 5. All the houses in the village are one-roomed wooden houses with thatched roofs, with the exception of the stone house of the former priest, which is now occupied by the president of the Kolkhoz. All buildings are in a bad state of repair, which is due to the very little time at the disposal of the peasants when they are not required to work on behalf of the Kolkhoz. The houses are austerely furnished with the barest furniture, most of which is home-made.
- 6. Lighting is by means of paraffin lamps. Very often lack of paraffin and difficulty in obtaining glass chimneys for the lamps compels the peasants to revert to their age-old custom of using slivers of pinewood as a means of lighting. They will have to wait another 15 years for electric lighting when all the new power stations are built. They are always being told about these new power stations, the cost of which is given as the reason for their present poverty.
- 7. For the most part, straw is used as fuel augmented by a load or two of wood. Although wood is plentiful in the forest, approximately eight km away, the peasants have great difficulty in obtaining the loan of horses from the kolkhoz for their private needs.
- 8. Water was obtained from three wells in the village and was adequate.
- 9. Each household had  $\frac{1}{4}$  hectare of land which is their only means of subsistence. Very few of the villagers still possess a cow of their own, most had to sell their livestock in order to pay the high taxes and nowadays only chickens are kept for their own use.
- 10. The collective farm includes the whole village of Bereznitsa and farms an area of approximately 350 hectares of which some 110 hectares are meadows.
- 11. The kolkhoz has four specialized farms (horse, dairy, sheep and pig) and their livestock consisted of:

12 horses

15 cows, 10 heifers

70 sheep

6 sows.

They also had 25 beehives, but the bees died during a cold winter.

- 12. Farm machinery consisted of: three ploughs, six cultivators, eight harrows, one horse-drawn threshing machine, pea-drying and sorting machines. The MTS in Gavril Posad provided the tractors, but I can give no details.
- 13. The Kolkhoz had the following areas under cultivation:

45 hectares winter rye

10 hectares winter wheat

8 hectares barley

13 hectares oats

5 hectares peas

3 hectares tares

3 hectares millet

1 hectares rootcrops for cattle feeding

15 hectares potatoes

- 14. The expected crop returns per hectare were 13 cwts of rye or 18 cwts of wheat or 20-25 tons of potatoes.
- 15. The President of the Kolkhoz was a lawyer from the Ukraine. He was the only outsider and incidentally the only Party member.
- 16. In the autumn of 1951 the Kolkhoz "Olotov" amalgamated with the neighbouring Kolkhoz in Skomovo (100 households and about 2000 hectares of land). The reason given for this was that new farm machinery was available at the MTS whose economical use would only be warranted if larger areas were farmed. However, the members of the kolkhoz did not expect improvement from this and purpose that they had to sell their last cow this winter in order to make ends meet.

17. Each member of the kolkhoz was required by statute of the "Ministry" to work 125 "working days" (trudodyen) per year. The values of the different work performed was decided arbitrarily by the president and his valuation was often used by him to inflict minor punishment. The actual payment for each "trudodyen" performed was assessed after the harvest was gathered in. After deduction of the State levy on crops and provision for seed reserves, the remainder is apportioned amongst the total number of "working days", if there is a remainder.

The value of a "working day" has never exceeded 200 grammes of grain and there have been occasions when no grain at all was available for 25X1 distribution.

44. Members of the kolkhoz had no personal documents and thus were obliged to stay on, as the issue of a "spravka" which would entitle them to move to another place would in all but very exceptional cases be refused.
